The billy goat doesn't know how to get out of the Town Hall tower. Can you help him find the way?

The Legend of the Poznań Billy Goats

In 1551, when Poznań Town Hall was being rebuilt, a great feast was due to take place in the celebration of installing a new clock on its tower. For this special occasion, many notable and honourable guests were to arrive, including the governor and his wife. It is small wonder that the food served at the feast had to be special as well. The piece de resistance was to be the leg of roe deer, prepared by master chef Mikołaj himself. All went very well in the kitchen, until the leg slipped off the spit, straight into the fire. The chef was devastated! However, one of the kitchen boys decided to find new meat for the roast. Unfortunately, roe deer was impossible to come by in the city, but he did manage to bring two white billy goats into the Town Hall kitchens. The animals, suddenly aware of their fate, tore away from the kitchen boy and escaped all the way up the tower. And as the guests were about to admire the new clock, their eyes were met with a very uncommon sight – two little white billy goats, butting their heads joyfully on the cornice of the town hall tower, causing general merriment. To commemorate these events, the mechanism of the tower clock was expanded with the metal figurines of two billy goats butting heads.
